

Dr. Adrien Fabre
CNRS, CIRED (Paris)
adrien.fabre@cnrs.fr

January 24th, 2024

Dear Angelos Alamanos,

Thank you for accepting our appeal and for giving us the opportunity to revise our manuscript.

We hereby submit our revised paper, "International Attitudes Toward Global Policies," co-authored with Thomas Douenne and Linus Mattauch.

We have carefully addressed each of the reviewers' comments and hope that the revised version is now fully satisfactory. When appropriate, we have taken peculiar care to politely indicate to the reviewers that certain of their concerns were already addressed in passages they may have missed. We have also considerably improved the clarity of the exposition to prevent readers from missing important information.

We note that reviewer #1 made the following point: "the title could be more informative about the content of the study. Also, it would be useful to convey the key finding or relationship that is investigated in the study in the title." Should our manuscript be accepted for publication, we would like to consult you as to whether it is more in-line with Nature Sustainability's practice to use a more informative title like: "Global redistributive and climate policies are genuinely supported by majorities worldwide".

Please find below the word count:

- 5 display items: 2 large figures, 2 medium tables, and 1 medium text box (165 words). Legend: 145 words.
- Main text (excluding abstract, display items, references, methods, headers): 3,497 words.
- Headers: 43 words.
- References: 21.
- Methods: 1,162 words.

Sincerely,

Dr. Adrien Fabre

